

Do I need special qualifications to take this training? Who attends this course?

There are no prerequisites for the Infant Massage Educator Certification Training.

This training is attended by a variety of individuals. Doctors & nurses, social workers & child and family welfare advocates, child life specialists, child & family intervention specialists, researchers & heads of health and human service agencies, adoption specialists, physical therapists, occupational therapists, speech therapists & massage therapists, daycare staff, yoga instructors, toddler & family class leaders, lactation consultants, childbirth educators & doulas attend the trainings. Equally, this course is attended by moms, dads, grandmas and grandpas, high school, college & graduate students, and any pick of the general population are among the many groups that make up our student base. Some folks look to baby massage as a way to enhance their existing career. Others look to it to change their path and others yet are looking to start something new for the very first time all together. How exciting! It is the variety in backgrounds, skills & education that offers our association the diversity that it so possesses. This is not a 'hands-on' course - you need not be 'licensed to touch'. All that is required is that the student be 18 years of age or older – so anyone can take this course!